

MICHAEL C. FINA

Matching The Exquisite to a Designer's Vision

The Michael C. Fina Company, leading purveyors of accoutrements for tableware and entertaining since 1935, continue to make their unique mark in the ultra-discerning world of luxury yacht and jet interiors. The New York-based firm, with a seventy-year history and an unequalled array of designers and choices, has become the partner of choice for yachting's top interior design talents. Karen Lynn Poulos of Fort Lauderdale's Karen Lynn Interiors, whose projects on Trinity, Pershing and Christensen vessels; and private aircraft, for a clientele that spans the globe, have secured her reputation, is effusive in her praise for Michael C. Fina and its offerings.

"The details of the tableware and tableware design are like the signature on a fine art masterpiece," says Karen Lynn. "They are complementary to the interior design as it relates to the color, style, and formality of the service aboard the aircraft or yacht."

Given Ms Poulos' challenge of blending dazzling combinations with the rigorous technical requirements of yacht interiors, she makes the dining experience a central component of her process. "It's all in the details and getting a feel for how the client is going to be entertaining. Will it be formal or casual? What is the amount of storage aboard the yacht or aircraft? How many types of different settings will be needed? If these are custom pieces, say, with the yacht's name or the family crest, that all needs to be designed and made. The possibilities are endless, with gold, platinum, even diamonds.

"It's all about yacht owners want to impress and indulge their guests and themselves. It's about out-doing each other. What better way to do it than through fabulous dining accoutrements?" She paints a picture: "Serving the finest champagne in Lalique or Baccarat crystal flutes; the world's finest caviar flown in and presented carefully on Mother of Pearl over a hand-carved ice sculpture; a Michelin three-star chef preparing a five-course meal in a stunning dining salon, its table dressed in the most luxurious crisp linens; the glow of candles; the scent of flowers; the finest china glistening like a gem; twenty-four karat gold tableware." She takes the same deep breath her clients and their guests will.

Karen Lynn Poulos sums it up. "It's the epitome of the fantasy of owning a yacht: the dazzle of an unforgettable experience. And to help deliver that experience, I trust the experts at Michael C. Fina."
